In this world that cradled great faiths and civilizations that moved men to strive under banners of diverse ideas which at times culminated into enmity and hostility between their adherents, we are compelled to check out things and realized that what seem to us as moral barriers are only perceptions; our respective Holy Scriptures preaching commonalities that could span whatever gaps that stand between and among us. The “Common Word” is a start off.

On the occasion of the celebration of the World Interfaith Harmony Week, we would like to extend our warmest salutations to the men and women of the Philippine Center for Islam and Democracy, Magbassa Kita Foundation and the Noorus Salam for spearheading the activity in the Philippines and marking the occasion with a colloquium on the “Common Word.” Finally, I extend my deep gratitude to His Royal Highness Prince Ghazi of Jordan for pioneering this initiative.

Peace be upon us all!
