

Sunday Service for World Interfaith Harmony Week

In honor of the by the UN proclaimed World Interfaith Harmony Week, the Church of Scientology Amsterdam hosted an interfaith Sunday Service. Guest speakers were United Religions Initiative Netherlands Chairman and a representative from the Liberal Jewish Synagoge. The religious background of the guests varied from Muslim to Christian and from Jewish to Scientologist.

The minister first introduced the World Interfaith Harmony Week and then the theme was introduced with a short video clip about the importance of respecting the religion of another. Then the URI Netherlands Chairman took over. He emphasized how happy he is to work together in Interfaith with Scientology and other religions as basically all religions are working towards the same goals.

Then it was time for the guest speaker who had participated in a tv program about different religions. She shared her personal story and how she has a life full with interreligious experiences. The Scientology minister closed the Service with a text from founder L. Ron Hubbard, called "What is greatness", followed with a song.

"It requires real strength to love Man. And to love him despite all invitations to do otherwise, all provocations and all reasons, why one should not." - L. Ron Hubbard

Of course after the service, with some nice coffee and tea, people could talk, get to know each other and plan future activities together.
