

Faith group launches new book

A book in which people of different religions and backgrounds tell their stories of finding their faith was launched at West Suffolk College last Wednesday by the Suffolk Inter-Faith Resource (SIFRE).

The group, which has links with University Campus Suffolk, of which the Bury St Edmunds college is part, also put on an exhibition illustrating 25 years of inter-faith work in the county. It is based at the University Campus, in Ipswich.

SIFRE chief executive David Cahey said:

"We operate at various venues and get involved with organisations, working with them on faith engagement issues such as diversity studies, raising awareness and dispelling myths about faith groups."

His wife Cynthia told launch guests that one reason for launching the book, Sharing Our Stories, at West Suffolk College was that it was about to launch a new degree pathway in Religious Studies and Ethics.

The book can be ordered at www.sifre.org.uk for £15 plus £3 postage.
